

Oil soaked hay invades north beaches; new strategy in effort to plug leak

High tides hampered efforts to clean ankle-deep oil from Gaviota and Refugio beaches today as oil workers struggled to stem new oil leaks in Santa Barbara Channel.

Strong southeast winds began pushing the oil inland along the coastline between Refugio Beach and Point Conception last Thursday. William Riddle, county ranger told the Record today that the Point and Jalama Beach had apparently escaped the fate of more southerly beaches—at least for now.

Riddle said he had seen three dead birds along Gaviota Beach. Swimming, surfing and fishing were at a standstill, according to the ranger.

Yesterday area residents reported ankle-deep oil on Gaviota and surf boards were heavily coated with the sticky oil.

Riddle said state and county officials had made frequent trips to Gaviota and Refugio since the new devastation began last week.

Meanwhile oil worker activated a well 5½ miles offshore today to siphon off gas from a pressurized pool beneath the ocean floor which has bubbled for six days and created an oil slick two miles long.

Engineers lowered an explosive device through the well shaft and blasted holes in the well casing. It was hoped the accumulated gas could be sucked through the holes to the surface and dissipated, thus removing the energy of the oil flow.

The shaft was located under the same platform where another well blew out last month. More than 230,000 gallons of crude petroleum boiled to the surface before the well was sealed with drilling and mud and concrete.

Interior Secretary Walter J. Hickel Monday granted permission for the operation to the Union Oil Co. The directive authorizing use of the well was effective for 72 hours.

The surface slick ranged from 10 to 30 feet wide and extended northwest of the platform. Fingers of the slick smothered kelp beds in heavy amounts near beaches at Gaviota and Refugio and some of the crude petroleum washed in on the sands.

Nearly 800 workers, 550 of them contracted by Union, again Monday laid down mats of loose straw in harbors and along beaches in Santa Barbara and Ventura Counties to soak up oil sent shoreward by a larger slick created by the runaway well last month.

Before the well was sealed Feb. 7, the slick it fed touched 35 miles of once-glistening beaches.

The new leak from the sub-bottom pool was described by Union as "residual seepage" formed by the previous uncontrolled well. The effort to halt the seepage coincided with the passing of a storm front.

Workers said it was hoped the flow from the pool could be stemmed before southwest winds trailing the storm push the slick toward the coastline.

In related developments Monday in Washington, Hickel announced new regulations, effective immediately, making oil companies liable for the cost of cleaning any future pollution of the sea from drilling on offshore federal leases.

The regulation stipulates the government would not be required to prove the oil firms were at fault. A spokesman for Hickel said the new order would not affect Union's Santa Barbara well. In any case, the firm has already volunteered to pay all costs stemming from the leakage.

The Interior Department unofficially estimated Monday it would cost at least $1 billion to make any permanent move to end drilling in the Santa Barbara Channel.

The cost cited would include only what the federal government would be forced to pay oil companies to cancel leases and the loss of oil royalties now paid into the U.S. Treasury.

Rep. Charles M. Teague, R-Calif., declared he would press for an end to the drilling despite the cost, Teague's district includes Santa Barbara.

AN OIL-SOAKED GREBE is camouflaged among the large clumps of oil-soaked hay and kelp that have washed ashore at Gaviota and Refugio Beaches during the past few days.

The hay, used to contain the oil slick at Santa Barbara, was pushed north by strong southeast winds. High tides are preventing beach clean-up at this time. (Photos by Dan Duffy)

OIL CONTAMINATION at Gaviota Beach provided surfer John Gil, formerly of Lompoc, with an unwanted paint job for his surf board. A piece of driftwood is being employed, not too successfully, to scrape away the layer of heavy oil.

Ranchers stymied in efforts to get Federal assistance

Learning that Lompoc Valley and other Santa Ynez River area farmers who suffered extensive flood damages recently have been stymied in attempts to get state or Federal aid to put their lands back in production, the Board of Supervisors renewed efforts Monday to help. Meanwhile, estimates of farm land flood damage in the county have risen in recent weeks from about $2.5 million to $4 million.

The board authorized Public Works Department officials to ascertain if surplus earth-moving equipment could be loaned to the farmers.

In addition, the State Disaster Office will be asked to raise the $2,500 maximum aid figure to $10,000 and more flexibility for Federal Housing Administration loans will be sought on behalf of the agriculturalists.

County Farm Bureau president John Beattie, of Lompoc Valley, told the board "we've run into a stonewall trying to get help." He explained that state disaster aid is geared for the public agencies rather than for agriculture.

A big need is for equipment to "redistribute and level the soil we have left," said Beattie. The Farm Bureau head said even if farm aid is raised to $10,000 maximum it "would be only a drop in the bucket" so far as many stricken valley farms were concerned.

"I just don't know how to point out the magnitude of the problem," he added.

The supervisors were told that aid "must come quickly if the land is to be restored and crops planted this year." Otherwise, the county will also be a big loser in declining tax revenues, it was shown.

Board chairman Francis H. Beattie, of Lompoc, said Congressional officials will be contacted this week to determine what new legislation has been introduced to help flood victims in the private sector.

New storm dumps .3 inches of rain on Valley; total 15.81

An estimated 214,000 acre feet of water has flowed over Cachuma Dam since the storms of Jan. 24 and more rain fell in scattered showers over Lake Cachuma and the Lompoc and Santa Ynez Valleys this morning.

Water was flowing through the gates at the dam today at the rate of 1,200 cubic feet a second—or at the rate of 2,400 acre feet of water each 24 hours, according to Andy Johnson, bureau of reclamation official.

During the torrential storms that began on Jan. 24 and Jan. 25 a peak of more than 80,000 cubic feet of water a second flowed through the dam's automatic gates.

Last night the rains dumped nearly a third of an inch of rain on the Lompoc area, raising the season's total of 15.81 inches. Last year at this time there had been 5.86 inches.

During the night and early morning hours Johnson recorded .44 of an inch of rain at the lake and more was falling at 8 a.m.

Violence keynotes state colleges' new semester

Stormy at SF State

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Spring semester got off to a stormy start at San Francisco State College Monday, after a two-week mid-semester break that included two bomb attacks on the beleaguered campus.

The first day of the new session was highlighted by the following developments:

—Striking students and faculty members attended class for the first time this year to circumvent a new enrollment check which would have eliminated courses not being taught.

—Acting President S. I. Hayakawa suspended two Negro faculty members for their part in a disruption at a faculty program where Hayakawa was speaking last week.

—The State Attorney General's office won a restraining order against the school's elected student officers, active supporters of the strikes, on grounds they violated trust and spent student body money for unauthorized purposes. Hayakawa said the amount may reach $100,000.

—Militants read "Quotations from Chairman Mao" and shouted for 20 minutes to break up a political science class taught by Dr. John Bunzel, a public critic of black nationalism.

—Detectives continued their investigation of Sunday's pre-dawn explosion which shattered 18 windows in the campus administration building. It was the second bomb blast of the mid-semester break.

—Mayor Joseph Alioto said it cost the city $622,704 to police the campus from Nov. 6, when the student strike began, through Jan. 17. He asked the state for reimbursement.

Most of the school's 16,000 students and 1,350 teachers attended class Monday to meet Hayakawa's requirement that both teachers and students sign special cards to establish classes.

"Our members shall establish their classes by meeting the first and only the first section of each course," said a leaflet handed out by members of the American Federation of Teachers. About 250 AFT members have been on strike since Jan. 6.

Rain

Rain turning to showers this morning. Decreasing showers this afternoon, then partly cloudy tonight and Wednesday. Slightly cooler. Highs both days in the 50s, low tonight in the 40s. Variable wind 5 to 15 m.p.h., becoming northwesterly tonight.

WEDNESDAY TIDES

High tide of 4.9 feet at 11:32 a.m. Low tides of 0.8 feet at 5:32 a.m. and 0.2 feet at 5:44 p.m.

Rain at Berkeley

BERKELEY, Calif. (UPI) — Rain kept the picketing down at the University of California's Berkeley campus Monday, but it did not dampen the incidents of violence.

Cherry bombs were hurled in at least five buildings and a tear gas canister was activated in the Student Union cafeteria.

About 200 serpentine militants overturned tables, broke ash trays and glasses, and tore a storage ledge from the wall in the cafeteria before the gas canister rolled into the room, forcing its evacuation for 30 minutes.

A few card files were also overturned in the library, but militants were prevented from doing serious damage. There was one arrest and two others surrendered to police on warrants. That brought to 79 the number arrested since the student strike began nearly a month ago over demands for an autonomous Third World college.

The campus march Monday followed a brief, unauthorized and unannounced campus rally. The Young Socialist Alliance had scheduled a full rally, but it was cancelled because police said it might have endangered public safety. The decision whether to okay rallies will be made on a day-to-day basis after consultations with police.

Man injured in auto crash near base gate

A Lompoc man was in satisfactory condition at Vandenberg Air Force Base hospital today despite injuries suffered in a grinding collision near the military installation's main gate.

Richard Garcia, 30, of 126-B N. C St., was admitted to the base hospital shortly after 8:14 p.m., with a cut over one eye and multiple bruises over his body, according to hospital officials. He was to remain in the hospital for observation.

Garcia was injured when his car was struck broadside by a car driven by James Thomas Stone, 36, of Arroyo Grande, according to the California Highway Patrol. Garcia was northbound on Lompoc-Casmalia Road at the intersection of the highway with Vandenberg Road, when Stone reportedly ran the red traffic signal enroute west on Vandenberg Road, investigating officers reported.

Stone was examined at the base hospital and released.

Both drivers had to be carried from their wrecked cars. Garcia's car rolled over with the force of the impact; Stone's car was demolished according to the report.

Immediate completion of the final feasibility report for the construction of the $67 million Lompoc Narrows Dam project was called for yesterday by the County Water Agency and Congressman Charles M. Teague.

The County Board of Supervisors, acting as the County Water Agency, yesterday, in a unanimous vote approved a resolution calling for the "immediate completion and submission of the feasibility report" by the regional office of the Bureau of Reclamation. The report recommends construction of a dam and huge reservoir on the outskirts of Lompoc.

The resolution cited the fact that the preliminary report was submitted to the County Water Agency in June of 1968 and returned, with comment, to the Bureau of Reclamation in November, 1968, but, "as of this date, the feasibility report has not yet been completed by the Bureau of Reclamation nor been submitted to the commissioner by the regional director."

The speed-up in action on the project was prompted by the recent disastrous flooding of the Santa Ynez River, flood damage to the lower reaches of the river to farm lands, to property within the city of Lompoc and to property within Vandenberg Air Force Base amounting to millions of dollars.

The resolution also pointed to the fact that the Narrows Dam Project, as presently proposed, includes 125,000 acre feet of flood control storage.

"The recent flood disaster on the lower reaches of the Santa Ynez River in the Lompoc Plain forcibly reiterated the need for flood control protection on the Santa Ynez River, downstream of the proposed Lompoc Project," the resolution read.

Meanwhile, in Washington, Congressman Charles M. Teague reported that he had contacted Floyd Dominy, commissioner of reclamation, concerning the project and that Dominy stated he would ask that the report be "expedited" so as to arrive in Washington "within the next 60 days."

Virgil Phelps, members of the board of directors of the Santa Ynez River Water Conservation District, stated that he will introduce a similar resolution calling for the "post-haste" completion of the study and submission at a special meeting of the district to be held in City Hall Thursday at 8 p.m. Phelps stated that the resolution will also strongly emphasize the flood control aspects of the project in view of the recent flood destruction.

City Council is expected to follow suit tonight at their regular meeting with a strong resolution urging rapid approval of the study.

Copies of all resolutions are expected to be forwarded to Secretary of Interior Hickel in addition to the two U.S. California senators, Congressman Teague State Senator Robert Lagomarsino, Assemblyman W. Don MacGillivray, Robert J. Pafford, Jr., regional director of the Bureau of Reclamation and F. G. Macias, branch chief of the Bureau.

With the completion of the final feasibility study, the report will be sent to Dominy for review and recommendation to Secretary Hickel. Hickel in turn will ask for comments from various federal government agencies, and it will then be forwarded to the State of California for agency comment. Upon completion of this procedure, the report will then be presented in its final form to the County Water Agency, original requestors of the study, for appropriate action. If determined feasible by the County Water Agency, it is expected that the Agency will then be the contracting agency for the project.

The report as it now stands shows a cost-benefit ratio of 1.75 to 1. A formula which means that over the course of the repayment period, for each dollar invested the project should yield 1.75 dollars in benefits. Bureau officials state that any project showing a ratio of better than one to one is feasible.

Teen advisory board proposed for Lompoc

First steps have been taken to establish a proposed teen-age advisory board under the sponsorship of the Parks and Recreation Commission. At their meeting last night, Recreation Superintendent Jack Anderson said he felt "a definite lack of teen-age activities" in Lompoc and that he would "like to see a community center for all age groups on the drawing board within the next couple of years."

He suggested contacting prospective teen-agers interested in organizing an advisory board with two teen-agers from each age group of 14 through 17. The youths would represent a cross section of leadership qualities and IQ levels, promoting year-round social and athletic activities subject to the approval of an adult advisor appointed by the Parks and Recreation Commission.

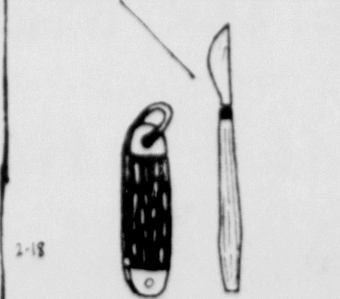

In other action:

—The revised and consolidated city bicycle route was approved, contingent upon the proper placing of uniform and recognizable signs by the sponsoring Jaycees. The matter will be forwarded to either Council or the Planning Commission.

The plan calls for a minimum of 25 metal signs mounted on 4x4 redwood posts.

Madri Gras festivities cause Shaw trial delay

By H. D. QUIGG
NEW ORLEANS (UPI)—The Clay L. Shaw jury and judge took a holiday today on a private front porch from which they could watch the color and festivity of Mardi Gras.

Judge Edward A. Haggerty Jr. said a friend of his had donated his porch, about 50 feet from an avenue down which will pass the traditional parade of Rex, King of Carnival. Haggerty declined to give the location.

In the span, he said, they would be able to see both the Rex and the Elks Krewe of Orleans parades.

Court was adjourned an hour early Monday when two of the jurors became ill. One suffered an upset stomach and the other from a high blood pressure condition.

An assistant coroner was called to tend them, and Haggerty said after court adjourned "They're all under pressure but it's nothing serious; I'm not thinking of calling an alternate juror."

Shaw, 55, is charged with conspiring here in September, 1963, to murder President John F. Kennedy. He is not charged with the actual murder.

Monday's session was adjourned part way through the state's examination of an expert medical witness who said his study of a motion picture of the murder—frame by frame—had left him with the opinion the fatal shot was fired from the front.

The witness was Dr. John M. Nichols, associate professor of pathology at the University of Kansas, author of many technical articles in his field, who said he had performed about 1,000 autopsies, supervised 1,000 more, and examined about 40,000 organic specimens taken from human bodies.

Supervisors approve efforts to increase superior court judges

The Board of Supervisors gave formal approval Monday to a resolution urging the State Legislature to increase the number of Superior Court judges in the county.

There now are six and a seventh is sought to sit at Santa Maria, thus giving the north county two departments.

Reason for the request is the "growing load of criminal and civil matters."

Presiding Judge John Rickard has said the new judge, if approved, would go to Santa Maria.

The resolution was advanced by Supervisor Curtis Tunnell, of Santa Maria.

In other matters, the supervisors:

—Voted to approve agreement between county and Air-Astro Transportation, Inc. to operate scheduled air carrier service from Lompoc County Airport to other California points.

Assistant Public Works Director Paul E. Price told the board that the first flights started Monday.

The proposal of the County Airport Committee suggested that the company build an addition to the existing airport administration building which would be utilized as a passenger terminal, ticket counter, and administrative offices for the corporation. A final agreement is to be drawn up this week as it was not possible to have it executed and ready by Monday due to a change in the corporate structure of the company.

The supervisors agreed to have Air Astro use Lompoc Airport and Santa Ynez Airport during the interim period and until such time as a formal pact can be executed.

—Voted to have board chairman Francis H. Beattie, of Lompoc, attend the "task force" meeting in Washington, D.C., of the National Assn. of County Officials legislative conference March 2-5 representing the county. Beattie said he feels there should be county representation because such vital subjects as residency welfare regulations, offshore drilling and other matters will be coming up "and we can help make a strong push for legislation that we need to help this county."

—Authorized Administrative Officer Raymond D. Johnson to attend a Legislative hearing in Sacramento March 3 on SB 81, pertaining to salary increases for county officials.

—Approved final map of Tract 10,917, located north of Burton Mesa Blvd., at north end of Country Club Rd., Vandenberg Village.

Floods leave health hazards at Paradise

The Board of Supervisors certified Monday that a "serious health hazard" exists in the flood-ravaged Paradise area on the upper Santa Ynez River.

County Health Officer Joseph T. Nardo told the board that the hazard has been posed by septic tanks being covered by mud and other debris, presence of animal carcasses, and other conditions.

Certification is needed before the area can receive Federal and state aid under disaster pronouncements, said Dr. Nardo.

Third District Supervisor Daniel G. Grant and members of Dr. Nardo's office toured the area over the weekend. They found there are at least a dozen homes "that can't be occupied." Also, a sanitation firm official checking the area said he was doubtful that septic systems would work where people were able to move back into their homes.

County Health Department officials said that the water systems were in reasonably good shape, however.

Administrative Officer R. D. Johnson said the supervisors' action "opens up new channels for applications for assistance" for Paradise homeowners and strengthens the position of the entire Santa Ynez River watershed area for aid from Federal and state sources.

Tough winter storm unwinds over mid-Atlantic coast

By United Press International

The remnants of a weekend storm in the Southeast spent their fury on the mid-Atlantic Coast today where gale warnings were up.

Inland, the Southern Appalachians still was getting a little snow and light snow fell in the Northern Plains and northern Great Lakes region.

Gale warnings were in effect today from Cape May, N.J., to Cape Lookout, N.C., with tides expected to be about two feet above normal from the Virginia Capes to Hatteras.

Louisville, Ky., got another inch within a six-hour period ending early today, raising the snow cover there to two inches.

Except for the snow in the Appalachian area and across the North, the only precipitation was scattered light rain across Northern and Central California.

Not far away, at Evanston, Wyo., was the nation's low temperature of 11 below zero at 2 a.m. Readings as low as the 30s were reported in the Gulf coastal states.

CHANGES NAMES

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The "Honey Fitz" and the "Patrick J." are now the "Julie" and the "Patricia." President Nixon announced the name changes for the two presidential yachts during the weekend. The old names were given the cabin cruises by President Kennedy, in honor of his grandfathers. Nixon decided to rename the boats after his daughters.

Missing yachts with Americans aboard spotted in Red China

By CHARLES R. SMITH
HONG KONG (UPI)—Three pleasure yachts apparently seized by Communist China bobbed at anchor today in a mainland Chinese harbor near Macao, spotted by coastal sailors. Peking maintained official silence on the fate of the 15 persons aboard, including six Americans.

The crewmen of cargo junks that ply the nearby Pearl River estuary reported Monday they had sighted the three yachts for the first time since they disappeared Sunday while on a Chinese New Year pleasure cruise from this British colony to Portuguese Macao.

The crewmen said they saw the boats in the harbor of a fishing village, a few miles from Macao, the Portuguese enclave 45 miles from Hong Kong.

Authorities in Hong Kong have said they were convinced the yachts had been intercepted by Red Chinese gunboats while cruising from Hong Kong to Macao.

Diplomats from several countries said attempts were being made to persuade Peking to admit capturing the yachts and agree to return them, with their passengers, to Hong Kong. They reported 'no positive response' to their queries.

The chairman of the Macao Yacht Club, Hernando Mecado Pinto, said he was in contact with provincial authorities in Canton through Communist intermediaries and had been assured they would "investigate" the incident.

In addition to the six Americans aboard the yachts, there were three Swedes, two Britons, one Frenchman, an Australian girl and four Hong Kong Chinese.

In another, unrelated yachting incident marine police reported Tuesday the disappearance of another British yachtsman, David Bailey, an architect from Lowestoft, Suffolk, England. Bailey disappeared Monday night while rowing in a small dinghy in search of his yacht which apparently broke anchor and drifted away. The vessel was anchored in Hong Kong waters, off Lamma Island.

The yacht was found by fishermen early Tuesday and turned over to marine police, who said no one was aboard.

Petition "log jam" predicted

County officials admitted Monday there may be a "log jam" of agriculturalists' petitions for farm preserves next week just before the deadline occurs Feb. 28 on recording of preserve for the coming tax year.

First indications of the frantic eleventh-hour rush that seems to be developing occurred Monday when the Board of Supervisors was asked to speed final action on 46 cases.

A number of these had been approved for preserve status, but had not had their maps cleared by the county surveyor. Others needed final actions on rezonings, or needed to sign agreements.

All 46 had been recommended for approval by the County Planning Commission and had been passed on by the County Agricultural Preserve Advisory Committee.

The supervisors voted approval of 21 new preserves Monday. In two other cases, the approval was conditioned on applicants meeting map requirements. Five applications were held up for one week until agreements could be signed, or maps finalized, or both.

"An intensive search is now under way to locate the missing dinghy and its occupant," police said. "Police launches are patrolling the waters off Lamma Island and Cheung Chau."

WHAT IS YOUR PURPOSE IN LIFE?

There is a mysterious something that all humans have a keen longing for. We have tried to find it in wealth, power, fortune, books and pleasure, but that something can be obtained in only one way. In every human being there is a Divine Spark that yearns for growth and expression, and no one can have complete happiness until that growth takes place. We long to be the creatures that God intended us to be, and the Divine Spark urges us to draw closer to our Creator.

Every man and woman can achieve this growth by sincere prayers and obedience, for it is a Divine gift. Your greatest need is strength to overcome evil, and only your sincere prayers can provide it. WHEN YOU ARE IN DOUBT, PRAY FOR GUIDANCE. WHEN YOU ARE TEMPTED BY EVIL, PRAY FOR STRENGTH TO OVERCOME. Give God the opportunity He deserves, to deliver you from harmful habits and other evil. Evil is God's enemy, as well as yours. To doubt God's ability to answer your sincere prayers for forgiveness, or for strength to overcome evil, is to doubt His existence.

Prayer is a privilege that no power on earth can deprive you of, nor deny you, and it is free to all mankind, regardless of race or color. To make plans without God, is to build in vain. Wisdom is to seek God and overcome evil.

Remember, that it is impossible to destroy evil with hate, intolerance and bloodshed, and that centuries of wars have never brought peace to mankind. Hate, intolerance, and greed for power and wealth, are children born of fear, who lack faith in God and His power of love. We worship God in vain, when we put our trust in the atom bomb, and in the law of the jungle, that "might makes right," for we thereby renounce our faith in God's divine Laws, and in the Command of the Prince of Peace, to love our neighbors and enemies. We cannot serve both God and evil.

True worship is to do God's will, and hate no one. It is God's will, and your duty in life, to help Him establish peace and brotherhood on earth, among all men and nations, and that should be your purpose in life.

MUSEUM — An organizational committee charged with preliminary steps leading to formation of Lompoc Valley Museum, last night approved by laws and articles of incorporation in principle. Ralph Patey, chairman of an organizational structure committee, and executive manager of Lompoc Valley Chamber of Commerce, will complete the final documents with the assistance of James Longtin, city attorney. The full committee, headed by Councilwoman Charlotte Benton and Earl Calvert, president of Lompoc Valley Historical Society, was selected by the City Council to form a museum. The museum will be housed in the old city library on South H Street as soon as the city's new library is completed on East North Avenue. The switch over will take place probably during the first week in March. The museum committee will meet again on March 31.

ELECTION — Candidates for Lompoc Unified School Board of trustees must have their nomination papers in the office of the county superintendent of schools in Santa Barbara by 5 p.m., Thursday to qualify for the April 15 election. Three candidates, including two incumbents have filed thus far. The candidates are Mrs. Marjorie Thomas, present president of the board; George Vance, incumbent; and newcomer, Mrs. Kenneth Dial, 28, a housewife. Two seats will be contested.

SPEAKER — Sgt. WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Department of Health, Education and Welfare says the No. 1 problem in education is the ever-growing number of teacher "dropouts" who quit the classroom to take higher paying jobs in the education field. It said "teacher dropouts are as indicative of our educational problems as are student dropouts."

VIENNA (UPI) — Friedrich III, the Roman emperor, was not buried in his tomb in St. Stephan's Cathedral here, tourists visiting the crypt were told today. Experts said the tomb was X-rayed last week and no trace of bones was found. The investigation began when church archives showed that Friedrich died 20 years before his tomb was finished.

Aquanaut's death halts Sealab III exploration

SAN CLEMENTE ISLAND, Calif. (UPI)—The death of a navy aquanaut from a heart attack on the ocean floor has brought an immediate suspension of the Sealab III project, man's most ambitious effort to conquer the ocean depths.

Berry M. Cannon, 33, a civilian electronics engineer, suffered cardiac arrest Monday 610 feet beneath the surface, where the water pressure is 19 times greater than normal.

"We are not going to continue diving operations until we are certain what the cause was," said Capt. William M. Nicholson, head of the Sealab III project.

"This will set the experiment back. We can't estimate for how long for this reason: The problem of finding out why may take some time."

An autopsy will be performed in San Diego and the 70-foot long, yellow Sealab habitat will be hauled to the surface for inspection.

Cannon's diving equipment was examined before and after his fatal dive and was found to be operating properly. But Nicholson pointed out the water temperature was 49 degrees and Cannon and his three diving companions were breathing almost pure helium.

"Helium does cause accelerated heat loss," Nicholson said. "We don't know this was the cause of death but we will try to find out. We can't begin to answer the question why, but we must have a pretty good answer before we propose to do any more operations."

Sealab III was the Navy's most elaborate undersea experiment. Five teams of nine aquanauts were to spend 12 days each living and working in the habitat-laboratory to test man's ability to function at great depths for long periods.

Cannon's death was the first since the Navy began its manned undersea exploration program with Sealab I in 1964. Sealab II was launched in 1965 and three teams of aquanauts including astronaut M. Scott Carpenter lived and worked at a depth of 205 feet for 15 days.

Cannon was a veteran of Sealab II, in which he was a mate of Carpenter on the first team. His death came during his second dive in less than 12 hours.

His death raised questions of why a relatively young man, considered in perfect physical condition, should have suffered a heart attack.

MANILA (UPI)—Legaspi City officials have come up with an incentive for public support of their rat extermination campaign: Anyone showing up with 10 rat tails will be admitted free to a series of dances.

State begins hearings on oil drill disaster

By CARL INGRAM
SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Two state Senate committees today summoned officials of the Union Oil Co. to testify on causes of the disastrous Santa Barbara oil leak and the damage it inflicted.

The Governmental Efficiency and Natural Resources Committees want to find out how to prevent a recurrence of the runaway well in offshore California drilling operations.

Among those invited to testify before the committees at a special joint hearing were John Fraser, Union vice president in charge of exploration and production, and Donald Solanas, Interior Department's regional oil and gas supervisor.

Although Union Oil's well leak triggered demands for tougher offshore regulation and outright halt to all drilling, both Governmental Efficiency Chairman Richard J. Dolwig and Natural Resources Chairman Robert J. Lagomarsino sought to give assurance the hearing would "not be accusative."

Dolwig and Lagomarsino said they wanted "to begin to fit together the pieces of an extremely serious and far-reaching array of public policies, programs and problems."

The hearing followed by one day issuance by Interior Secretary Walter Hickel of regulations making oil companies liable for the cost of cleaning up pollution from drilling on federal offshore leases. The regulations were not retroactive, although Union Oil has said it will pay all costs involved in the Santa Barbara cleanup.

Many miles of shimmering white southern California beaches were fouled by thousands of gallons of crude oil from Union's offshore well until it was sealed Feb. 7. A second leak from an ocean floor fissure broke loose later and threatened a new beach assault.

Testimony on effects of the oil slick on California beaches and fish and wildlife was sought from state Fish and Game Director Ray Arnett and Parks and Recreation Director William Penn Mott Jr.

Delegations also were expected from Santa Barbara, Carpinteria, Ventura, Oxnard and Port Hueneme, the five Santa Barbara Channel cities where the oil slick occurred.

Others called on to testify included Paul De Falco, regional director of the Federal Water Pollution Control Administration; Don Robinson, Superintendent of Channel Islands National Monument; and Frank Hortig, executive officer of the state Lands Division which has jurisdiction over offshore drilling in state owned lands.

A major concern to state and local officials is strengthening of federal rules to meet those of state regulations governing drilling for oil under the ocean. Gov. Ronald Reagan has said that the federal standards are only a third as strict as the state's.

He has called on the federal government to adopt the state's tougher minimum regulations.

Queens, princess reign at Valentine ball of Beta Sigma Phi

FIVE QUEENS and a princess were crowned Saturday night at third annual Valentine Ball of Beta Sigma Phi. Introduced and presented by thie individual chapters were, from left: Mrs. Dale Borgard of Omega Pi chapter; Mrs. Ed Collins, Theta Epsilon; Mrs. Jimmy Mills, Xi Lambda Iota; Mrs.

Proceeds to charity causes

"Cupid's Starlight Ball" was the theme Saturday night as chapters of Beta Sigma Phi presented their chosen "queens" at the sorority's annual ball in Lompoc Elks Clubhouse.

Appearing to float through clouds were four cupid cutouts, encircled by hundreds of stars. Centering tables covered in red were pink cupids floating on silver clouds within a cage.

A no-host cocktail hour preceded the barbecued steak dinner, after which official presentations of the queens took place. Introduced as the choice of Phi Theta Tau, junior chapter, as their princess, was Miss Donna Plante, escorted by John Gilmore II, and presented by Mrs. Darrell Ward.

Presented by Mrs. Roy Graves and escorted by her husband Victor was Sherry Morgan of Alpha Alpha Rho.

Presented by Mrs. Eugene Frankhouser and escorted by her husband James was Shirley Love of Chi Phi chapter.

Introduced by Mrs. Howard Williams and escorted by her husband Dale was Sandra Borgard of Omega Pi. Presented as Theta Epsilon's queen and escorted by her husband Ed was Gloria Collins.

Presented by Mrs. John Lysinger and escorted by her husband Jim was Wanda Mills of Xi Lambda Iota chapter.

Following coronation ceremonies, past and current queens and their escorts lead the dancing to music by the Moonlighters.

Proceeds from the ball are annually used to augment the sorority's program of charitable donations.

Conference fashions modeled by juniors

Themed "Fashions for Convention" was the style show presented for California Federated Women's Clubs Tiera Adorada District Junior Membership conference Saturday in Goleta. Modeling their own creations were 37 junior women. Serving as commentator was Mrs. Roger Lytel of Santa Barbara. Participating was Mrs. Dale Anderson, Lompoc Jr. Alpha member and district historian, modeling her sand-toned coat and dress ensemble.

Sporting the theme, "Let Me Entertain You," will be the junior district convention April 25-26 in Thousand Oaks. Presiding over the two day event will be Mrs. William Paulin of the Lompoc Club, and district president.

To be initiated at the Saturday awards dinner will be Mrs. Carl Morgan of Simi, incoming president, and her board. Husbands of junior club members will be welcome at the luncheon.

Significance of report - writing by club chairmen, was explained by Mrs. Dan McKinnon prior to workshops on the subject. Leading these were Mrs. Paulin, Mrs. Morgan, Mrs. Roderick of Thousand Oaks, Mrs. James Maxwell of Fillmore, and Mrs. McKinnon.

"Special Approaches to Venereal Disease Education" was presented by Alice M. Heath, M.P.H., coordinator of the University of California Extension course at Santa Barbara.

Veneral disease was declared as California's leading communicable disease of 1968 with a count of 87,000 reported cases. "Results of uncurd cases can result in sterility, insanity, blindness, paralysis, crippling arthritis, deafness, heart disease and death," Mrs. Heath said. "Basic medical and public health facts are presented to emphasize clearly that venereal diseases are very difficult to detect, with the majority of people carrying venereal diseases not aware of the early symptoms, or possibly not showing symptoms at all."

Lompoc Juniors delivered a box of crossword puzzles and answers to the conference; for district shipment to service men overseas.

Lompoc women participating in the conference business meeting were: Mrs. William Paulin, Mrs. William Boone, general district president; Mrs. Roger Hutflesz, Junior State mental health chairman; and Mrs. Gene Wahlers, district corresponding secretary.

Also attending from Lompoc were Mrs. William Cockshott, club president; Mmes. Dale Anderson, Louis Garcia, William Gleason, Kenneth Hoyt, Ronald

Western heroes to visit hoedown

For a typical Western hoedown this Saturday night guests will dress as their favorite Western hero. Occasion is the first of several events for rushees of Alpha Zeta Chapter, Epsilon Sigma Alpha. Party hostess will be Mrs. Charles Slothower, chapter vice president.

Meeting last week in the home of Mrs. Harold Patton, 1313 E. Locust Ave., members completed hostess plans for the March 1 meeting of Las Flores Regional Council. The event will take place at Loop's Restaurant.

Reporting on the monthly food basket given to a needy family, was Mrs. Kenneth Anderson, philanthropic chairman.

Education program of the evening was "The Story of Antibiotics," presented by Mrs. Richard Humble.

Knight, Ed Lewis, Maynard Steffen, James Ward, Jack Wilber, and Mrs. Leonard Clayton, Alpha-Junior Alpha coordinator.

Lompoc Jr. Alpha Club will meet this Wednesday evening at the Alpha Clubhouse. Planned is a discussion of conference results.

Grange award presented to Lucy Kalin

Presented to Mrs. Lucy Kalin Thursday night by Grange Master Mrs. James Larson was the certificate award of appreciation from State Master Chester Deaver.

Discussed was the oil slick damaging the local area beaches.

Voted was a year book of all Grange activities to be sent each member.

Appointed by Master Larsen were committee chairmen: Mr. and Mrs. Johnny Graton, youth organization; Emmett Schuyler, school activities; Anna Vance, death benefit; Veril Campbell, membership; Claude Pratt, business agent; Mrs. James Allen, scrapbook; Mrs. Charley Kendall, Mrs. Earl Nelman, Mrs. Ray Cameron and Mrs. Jean Bigelow, decorations for special activities.

Announced was the Santa Barbara County Pomona meeting to be held at Los Alamos this Wednesday evening. Next Lompoc Grange meeting is Feb. 27 at 8 p.m.

Awarded the door prize was Mrs. Jerald Scolari.

Served by Mrs. K.C. Fairbanks, Mrs. R.D. Manfrina and Mrs. Walter E. Ploch were refreshments of strawberry torte and beverages. Hearts and cupids set a Valentine theme.

Sorority features flower arranging

Members of the Alpha Alpha Rho chapter of the Beta Sigma Phi learned about flower arranging at their recent meeting in the home of Mrs. Joel Hroblak, 555 Carina.

Guest speaker Mrs. Earle Rosse employed many types of containers and flowers available this time of year to demonstrate the use of succulants and dried flowers. Mrs. Ross is a perennial winner at flower shows in the area.

Guests welcomed were Mmes. Lester Rikard, John Bland and E. Ingram.

After the demonstration, refreshments were enjoyed

Nursery school program slated

"Your Child's Sexual Development" will be the subject tonight at the monthly parents' meeting of United Church Nursery School. Guest speaker will be Mrs. M. Eileen Dunn, R.M., Public Health Department, City of Santa Barbara. Program hour is 8 p.m.

Quite new to the Lompoc area, Mrs. Dunn received her B.S.N. at Cal State, Los Angeles. Her major field of interest and postgraduate work was in child and adolescent psychology. She has had special training at the Neuro-psychological Unit, UCLA, and has a certificate in Crisis Intervention.

Mrs. Dunn has had much experience in setting up Sex and Health Education programs in East Los Angeles. Topics to be covered in the nursery school program include: telling your child about sex; homosexuality; masturbation; toilet training; how does your own attitude toward sex affect your child, from birth on. To be discussed is the normal development of a child and how parents may successfully "get through" the various stages.

Dear Abby

Who should take Johnny to the barber

DEAR ABBY: Don't faint, but I am a very happily married woman. My problem is a small one, compared to most, and my husband and I have decided to let you settle it.

Who do you think should take our seven-year-old son to the barbershop? My husband thinks I should take him after school. I think my husband should take him when HE goes to get his hair cut on Saturday afternoons.

I think it's "sissy" for a boy to be taken to a barbershop by his mother. But when his father takes him, it helps make a man out of him. What do you say?

CHICAGO
DEAR CHICAGO: I say, it might make men out of little boys to go the barbershop with their fathers on Saturdays, but it makes nervous wrecks out of barbers.

There are very few hours during the week when a working man can get to the barbershop, and little boys can go after school. So have a heart, Lady, and give the working man (AND the barber) a break.

DEAR ABBY: Everytime my husband's ex-wife has a death in her family my husband runs to the wake, and if possible to the funeral, too. These are all his ex-wife's relatives and I don't like it one bit. I have also been married before, and my ex-husband and I certainly don't carry on like this.

When I complain, my husband says that he would go to anybody's wake and funeral who were friends of his. Please answer soon as his ex-wife still has lots of relatives left. Thank you.

DISTURBED
DEAR DISTURBED: A man who wants to pay his last respects to "a friend" - even tho he or she was related to his ex-wife, shouldn't be criticized. A wake, or funeral isn't exactly a jamboree.

DEAR ABBY: I just read the letter signed "CONCERNED," who wrote to you about her husband who encouraged their 10-year-old daughter to give him long, hard kisses on the lips.

This has been a problem in our family also. Our son-in-law has kissed all his children on the lips until they got old enough to rebel. His 15-year-old daughter will no longer permit it, and neither will his 13-year-old son.

When they visited us, and we saw our son-in-law kissing his children full on the mouth, it was disgusting to my husband and me. My husband told my daughter that her sons would grow up not knowing whether to kiss men or women if she didn't put a stop to it. We also tell our grandsons that boys should shake hands with men, and kiss women. When our children were small we always kissed them on the forehead or cheek, never on the lips. Did we do right in interfering?

READING
DEAR READER: In my book - yes!

CONFIDENTIAL TO THE 19-YEAR-OLD STUDENT AT THE UNIVERSITY IN MONTREAL, CANADA, WHO SIGNED HIMSELF "QUANDARY": You are on the wrong track. There are any number of fine psychiatrists to whom you can go to discuss your "problem" without fear of having it disclosed. Look further, and skip your relatives.

Everybody has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply write to Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Cal., 90069 and enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

For Abby's booklet, "How To Have A Lovely Wedding," send $1.00 to Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Cal., 90069.

Purple Martin Is Only Bird with a Newspaper

By JIM CROSSLEY

If the Griggsville, Ill., Wild Bird Society prevails, this will be a better world for man, beast and bird.

Listen, don't shrug off the Griggsville Wild Bird Society. That is a name to be reckoned with—largely because of its monthly newspaper, another name to be reckoned with, "The Purple Martin Capital News."

From 24 to 32 pages, tabloid size, carrying no advertising, the News started out as a combination community news and bird news publication. As a result of popular pressure, it has wound up (in its fourth year) as the only newspaper published about a bird.

Residents of eastern United States are familiar with the birdhouse apartments seen high on poles in the vicinity of old farmhouses. Some of them go back almost to colonial days.

These are purple martin houses and the old residents valued the bird for its insect-eating abilities.

As nature-lovers do, it's the practice to toss about the figure of 2,000 mosquitoes a day as the average consumption per bird. However, in nature lore there is always a touch of controversy plaguing such all-encompassing facts. Every now and then, the News has to quell antimartin people who not only question the 2,000 figure but wonder if the martin eats mosquitoes at all.

Not to take sides, the bird does live on insects and it's safe to say that, in the interest of mankind, the more birds and the fewer sprayed insecticides the better.

The newspaper and the wild bird society got started when the Griggsville, Ill., Jaycees started on a big clean-up-the-mosquitoes campaign back in 1962. A local manufacturing firm developed an aluminum purple martin house to encourage increased martin residence and they went up on the town's telephone poles.

The campaign was even more successful than expected. The town (pop. 1,240) became known as the Purple Martin Capital. So many inquiries about the mosquito campaign flooded in that the Wild Bird Society was founded to answer them. Meanwhile, the local plant's martin house began selling like crazy and finally the martins had things complicated to the point that the newspaper was founded to simplify them.

The martins can be proud of their paper. It prints pages of amusing letters from bird-watcher subscribers, mostly amateurs. For many readers, their interest in the purple martin and trying to attract families of them to their own apartment-birdhouses is a first step to interest in wildlife and conservation at large.

A far-flung staff of bird observers contributes regularly to the News. Sandwiched in are articles by experts on general nature subjects. Everybody participates. The purple martin is the patron bird, of course, but the interest spreads over all American wildlife, particularly in the direction of encouraging efforts to help bird species, like the bluebird and roseate spoonbill, threatened by man-created changes in their environment.

For gentle, not-too-scientific, good fun concerning nature, there's nothing like the Purple Martin Capital News. It costs $3 a year for membership in the wild bird society and this includes a subscription to the paper. Address is Griggsville Wild Bird Society, Griggsville, Ill. 62340.

PHARMACY PHACTS

From ART SMITH

Please do guard your good health! Like youth, good health is something that many of us take for granted until it seems to have "suddenly" slipped away. In fact, it some times seems as though a person's health can almost be gauged by what he or she "takes two at a time"—stairs or pills! And if you think the human body has a limitless number of "things" that can go wrong, just put yourself in the position of a giraffe with a sore throat or a hippopotamus with chapped lips! Physical problems? Most of us have them—sooner or later—but you can guard against many of these problems by taking careful, intelligent care of yourself. And please do go to your doctor for that vitally-important physical checkup . . . at least once each year!

Team, you can be pretty sure that Eddie is one of the world's best dummy players.)

South's three-club bid was preparatory to raising hearts but when North took control and contracted for six diamonds South was delighted to play the hand there. Dummy's king of spades won the first trick. A low diamond lost to East's ace and a spade was led back.

This hand illustrates the theme of not taking a discard until you have to do so. Eddie didn't know whether he should discard a heart or a club so he just ruffed and played his jack of diamonds.

Then he cashed dummy's ace and king of hearts. When the queen dropped he did cash dummy's queen of trumps and discarded his jack of clubs on the ace of spades.

If the queen of hearts had not dropped, South would have discarded his jack of hearts on the ace of spades and ruffed a heart. If hearts broke he would have entered dummy with the queen of trumps and discarded his jack of clubs on the last heart. If hearts failed to break, he would have still been able to try the club finesse.

In other words, the combination play was going to work unless one defender held four hearts to the queen and the club finesse was wrong.

Let's face it, wet wash is a real monster. Why fight it? Without a dryer you're the victim.

It means that every year you lug 2,000 pounds 40 miles in round trips from house to clothesline. You pinch and unpinch about 10,000 clothespins. Huskies learn about Alcindor once again

By RON SUPINSKI
UPI Sports Writer

Lightning does strike twice in the same place much to the chagrin of Washington coach Tex Winter and his hopped-up Huskies who have given mighty UCLA its two toughest games of the season.

And in both cases the bolt out of the blue happened to be Lew Alcindor, the Bruins' 7-1½ all-America center.

He triggered an 11-point spree late in the second half Monday night to lift the top-ranked Bruins from a four-point deficit to a 53-44 win over the Huskies. The nine-point margin was the closest of the season for UCLA, topping its 62-51 win over Washington in Los Angeles Feb. 7.

Alcindor pumped in 22 points, 14 of them in the second half, to lead all scorers. He was the only Bruin in double figures.

It was the same way in the first contest between the two teams. In that game, Alcindor bucketed 28 points.

In both games between the teams, Washington led at halftime. At Pauley Pavilion it was 33-25 and 22-21 Monday night.

Meanwhile, the Washington State Cougars downed Southern California 64-52 at Pullman to solidify their hold on second place in the Pacific Eight Conference with a 6-3 mark behind UCLA's 8-0, USC dropped to 4-4.

Guard Rick Erickson of the Cougars pumped in 15 of his 21 points to shove his mates into a 36-28 halftime lead. Biggest WSU lead was 16 points at 50-34 midway through the second half.

Cougar center Ted Wierman tallied 15 points to become the seventh alltime scorer in WSU basketball history with 963, passing Charlie Sells who had 958.

Top man for USC was Steve

Jennings with 14 points.

With Washington leading UCLA 32-28, the Bruins went on an 11-0 spurt to notch their 36th win in a row. After UCLA tied the score, Alcindor put the Bruins ahead for keeps 35-32 with a three-point play. Then the tall center assisted on the next bucket and rebounded following a Washington miss to help shove his mates into a 39-32 lead with 5:42 left.

Jay Bond had 13 and George Irvine 11 for Washington.

UCLA is now 20-0 for the season and Washington 11-10. In the Pacific Eight the Huskies are 4-5.

In other games, Weber State improved its record to 21-2 by downing Idaho 85-61 with the help of Justus Thigpen's 18 points. Sacramento State rolled up its highest point total of the season in defeating Fresno Pacific 105-79. Gonzaga University shot 59 per cent from the floor to edge Idaho State 85-81 and Linfield dumped College of Idaho 78-61.

Portland plays at Seattle Pacific tonight. San Francisco State (9-0) and UC Davis (8-1) renew their torrid battle for the Far Western Conference title. UC Davis plays host to Chico State while the Gators visit Hayward State.

University of Nevada, Reno, is at University of Nevada, Las Vegas, to settle the championship of the Silver State.

Two groups eye NHL franchise

NEW YORK (UPI)—The National Hockey League, trying to bail out a losing franchise, decides today if it will transfer the Oakland club to another American City, stand pat or give Canada its third entry in the circuit.

For years Toronto and Montreal have been the only cities in Canada to house NHL franchises. Vancouver, British Columbia, had a previous bid to secure the expansion West Division club and appears in the driver's seat to make today's pitch a successful one.

Dime store heirs Seymour and Northrup Knox also try again for the NHL jackpot as they renew their presentation for the Seals' transfer to Buffalo, N.Y. The heirs to the Woolworth Co. fortune boast that Buffalo already is a big league city with a team in the American Football League and the spillover of fan interest would easily support a franchise.

Labatt's breweries of Vancouver had the inside track on a franchise last year, but when the NHL Board of Governors elected to give the Seals another chance in Oakland the Canadian beer firm lent the club money to bail itself out of debt. The return this season apparently does not warrant continuing a franchise in the California city.

SWIMMING AS a competitive sport for valley youngsters is available through the Lompoc Marlins, a recreation department - sponsored team which competes with other swim clubs in the central coast throughout the spring and summer months. Berths on the traveling team are gained through participation in a competitive swim class with youngsters being placed on the team after specified times. Latest to be added to the team are these youngsters, left to right: team mascot Karlyn Pipes, Derek Pipes, Donna Howard, Tom Hicks, Denise Buzan, Marshall Frasher, Tonya Gil and Susan McConnell. Team coaches are Earl and Marie Cully.

Marlins youth swim team begins workout

Competitive swimmers in the younger age groups acquired a taste for racing at a winter invitational meet last week. After practice sessions in a competitive class, seven new swimmers reached time standards set by the Lompoc Marlin team and have become members.

Those newest additions to the Marlins competitive team are Derek Pipes, Donna Howard, Tom Hicks, Denise Buzan, Marshall Frasher, Tonya Gil and Susan McConnell.

The competitive class is held on Tuesday and Thursday nights. To be eligible to join, a child, (any age) must have had all basic swimming skills and hold a current swimmers card or have had competitive racing experience.

Basic swim skills are: American crawl - advanced beginner class; open turns and breaststroke - intermediate class; back crawl and perfection of strokes - swimmers class. The purpose of the competitive class is to further a swimmer's abilities and prepare him for competitive racing. Only the basic variations of strokes already learned are taught. A new stroke, the butterfly, is introduced. Swimmers also learn starts and flip turns.

Should there be no progress shown at the end of a six week period, coaches will possibly suggest going back to a swimmers class to perfect

USLTA, pro net groups find peace

NEW YORK (UPI)—There'll be love, peace and harmony in U.S. tennis circles today.

A compromise agreement is expected to be reached between the United States Lawn Tennis Association and two pro tennis groups at a 4 p.m. EST meeting. At that time the National Tennis League and World Championship Tennis probably will reach some accord concerning prize money payoffs.

The two pro outfits previously threatened to boycott the four "open" tournaments scheduled in this country during 1969 if there were no definite financial arrangements regarding fees and restrictions of money prizes to "registered players."

Successful negotiations would permit the pros to play in open tournaments in Madison Square Garden, Forest Hills, Las Vegas and the Pacific Southwest.

Rod Laver, Tony Roche, Ken Rosewall and Pancho Gonzalez are among the top pros controlled by the professional circuits. The organizations have been complaining that "registered" amateurs sometimes take home too big a share of the loot in open competition and that some restrictions should be made against this practice.

strokes or change to another type of class such as a synchronized swim class. Not all good swimmers are capable of speed, but often are outstanding as slower synchronized swimmers.

The young competitive swimmers who have met the time standards required have not yet finished their training. They must maintain these times in order to remain on the Marlin team.

The Marlin team is open to any person who has had experience in competitive racing and can make and maintain time standards set for standard distances, in at least two strokes. Coaches Earl and Marie Cully are available any weekend evening between 5:30 and 6:30 to check out applicants. In the event that extra attention is required for strokes, the applicant will be asked to join a competitive class.

A parent must register each swimmer and pay yearly dues at the Lompoc Recreation Department before any member may attend practice sessions.

The Marlin Swim Team is a self-supporting organization, sponsored by the Lompoc Recreation Department. Its purpose is to introduce local swimmers to competitive racing and to provide them with competition on their own level and to prepare competitive swimmers for higher levels of competition. The Marlins are Tri-County and A.A.U. sanctioned.

Through active participation of parents and volunteer workers, a Marlin Team Parents Booster Club has been organized. All interested parents of Marlin Swim Team members are invited to attend meetings that will be held the second Monday of each month at the Lompoc Recreation Building. The meetings are held from 5:30 to 6:30 p.m.

Chargers will play four NFL clubs

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — The San Diego Chargers have announced a pre-season football schedule featuring meetings with four members of the National Football League.

The American Football League Chargers play on successive weeks starting Aug. 2 the Baltimore Colts, New Orleans Saints, Oakland Raiders, Cleveland Browns and Los Angeles Rams.

The lengthy home schedule was sought by the Chargers in conjunction with San Diego's 200th anniversary celebration of its establishment as a city. Charger officials said Monday the schedule was subject to approval by football commissioner Pete Rozelle.

RENO (UPI) — William P. Lear says recent bad weather has delayed completion of his "Indianapolis 500-type" track north of this gambling center.

Lear said the track should be completed by April 1. He is building a steam-engine racer to compete in this year's Indianapolis 500 on Memorial Day.

Owners offer to up jackpot

By FRED DOWN
UPI Sports Writer

NEW YORK (UPI)—The major league clubowners' offer to avert a spring training boycott by adding $200,000 to the $1-million players pension fund was referred to the players by their association's executive director today with a recommendation to vote "no."

The owners led the next move in the dispute up to the players Monday when they rejected a proposal for a three-man arbitration board and then made their new money offer. John Gaherin, chief negotiator for the owners, said the new money would increase the clubs' contribution to $5.3-million.

Marvin Miller, executive director of the players' association, said he will take the proposal before the players' executive committee but will advise the players not to accept it.

The apparent hardening in the positions of both sides came as the advance guards of players began to arrive at various spring training sites. Fewname players are expected to report unless the pension issue is resolved but the extent of the boycott is not yet clear. Not a single regular reported to the Chicago White Sox' camp in Sarasota, Fla., Monday but General Manager Jim Fanning of the Montreal Expos said 11 players have indicated they will report at West Palm Beach, Fla., and General Manager Spec Richardson of the Houston Astros said he has signed 29 of the 50 players on the Houston Roster.

Gaherin said the addition of the $200,000 proposed by the clubowners could be used effectively to increase pension benefits, disability, widows' benefits, life insurance and health care benefits. He said the players' pension fund "already is unequalled in professional sports or elsewhere."

Miller said the "dim prospects for a rapid settlement will probably lead to the elimination of any meaningful spring training this year" and added, "the 1969 baseball season is in jeopardy." The players have threatened to carry their boycott into the regular season if an agreement is not reached.

In Tampa, Fla., Cincinnati Reds' General Manager Bob Howsam spoke for most of the owners when he said the players "must realize there is a stopping point in their demands."

MOSCOW, Idaho (UPI)—Robert T. Thompson, 31, who coached defense and receivers at Oklahoma State University for the past three years, Monday was named an assistant football coach at the University of Idaho. Thompson's selection completes the six-man staff under head coach Y.C. McNease.

Rod & Gun With The 'Old Salt'

By M. C. COCKSHOT

The long-looked for opening day of the 1969 salmon season was ushered in last weekend. Despite weeks of storm and strife, conditions were good.

As usual there were lots of fish with a preponderance of "shakers," or under - sized fish, but if things follow the normal pattern the fish should get larger as the season goes along.

There is a three fish limit until Mar. 1, after which the limit drops to two fish with the same bonus 20-inch fish allowed in the bag.

With the cessation of rain lake fishing has started to pick up and if the climatic conditions are good, it looks like we'll have a banner year for freshwater fish in all local lakes.

Further afield, angling is also picking up but the worst is yet to come, later in the season when the extraordinary snow pack in the Sierras begins to melt and runs off in the rivers.

Steelhead fishing in local creeks is on the slow side. All waters are still muddy and hard to fish. However, a few nice fish have been taken in San Luis Creek. The whole aspect of the stream has changed with trees rooted up and the water filled with brush in such quantities that it will take some time to learn the holes and sand bars that had been in place for over a year. One thing that is of benefit, is that once it returns to normal, the regular stream will be fairly free of trash.

Lake Cachuma has opened again. The marina took a bad beating with water up to the concession stand floor. While the lake boats were mostly all saved, things were not good for many of the private boats which were at anchor. The water came up so fast that there was little to be done.

One party from Arroyo Grande, Mr. and Mrs. Bob Erwin, reported coming home after a day at Cachuma with limits of large trout. Several days later they returned with Bob's better half coming out high on the list with one fish. Bob was skunked.

Margarita Lake is yielding some nice catfish but the climate has been on the chilly side. Bass fishing is quiet and will remain so until the water gets a little cleaner. This may not occur for some time as water is still going over the spillway.

Anglers in the oceans off San Luis Obispo County, including surf fishermen, while feeling for their Santa Barbara counterparts, are very relieved to find that the oil slick has so far not affected the northern-most beaches.

What affect the slick will have on bait and forage fish conditions is hard to determine at this time. Last year the anchovies and other food fish were in the Santa Barbara channel, hence there was extra good salmon fishing in that area last year. We must wait and see about this year.

In Sacramento the new director of the California Department of Fish and Game has already begun to shake things up in the department. Bob Jones is apparently out as deputy director, being replaced by Larry Cloyd, who has been manager of region five since 1967. Prior to that he was manager of region four in Fresno for 10 years.

Cloyd has had a very eventful career with the DFG and is well-known through his cooperative work with the Central Council of Conservation and the California Wildlife Federation. Charley Fullerton, who many old - timers will remember as a warden in this area and who was chief of the wildlife protection branch of the department, has been named chief of the operations division, a new civil service post.

Gamecocks jump ahead of McGuire's schedule

By STEVE SMLANICH
UPI Sports Writer

NEW YORK (UPI)—Frank McGuire, the talented coach who built basketball powerhouses at St. John's and North Carolina, is slightly ahead of schedule in his efforts to develop South Carolina into a national leader.

McGuire's program to return respectability to the Gamecocks took a big step forward today when the young South Carolina squad jumped to the No. 11 spot in the latest weekly United Press International major college ratings. They were 18th the week before.

Unbeaten Santa Clara replaced North Carolina in the Unveiling for Ted expected shortly

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The official unveiling of Hall of Famer Ted Williams as the Washington Senators' new manager is expected to take place Wednesday or Thursday after attorneys work out the financial details of a deal which also will make the former slugger a part owner of the club.

Williams, who batted .406 in 1941 and compiled a lifetime .344 average during his career with the Boston Red Sox, is expected to sign a contract calling for $100,000 a year in addition to obtaining stock worth around $900,000.

The offer was made by Robert Short, who purchased the Senators in January for a reported $9-million.

The Senators have finished in the American League's Second Division for 22 consecutive seasons and were last in 1968.

OAKLAND (UPI) — Jimmy Williams, manager of the Oakland Athletics' Pensacola club in the class-A Carolina League, was elevated Monday to pilot Des Moines in the triple-A American Association. Des Moines consists of players from Vancouver of the Pacific Coast League.

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—Kiev Dynamo, soccer champions of the Soviet Union, tackles the California Clippers Sunday at Kezar Stadium in the first match between a U.S. and Russian soccer team.

The Russians arrived Monday night. They were to be welcomed today at a city hall reception by Mayor Joseph L. Alioto before working out at Balboa Stadium.

runnerup spot. For the 11th consecutive week the UPI Coaches Rating board made the UCLA Bruins a unanimous choice as the No. 1 team.

UCLA, winner of 35 straight games over a two-season period and unbeaten in 19 starts this season, accumulated 350 points in the balloting in which points are distributed on a 10-9-8-7-6-5-4-3-2-1 basis.

Santa Clara (21-0) received 298 points while North Carolina (19-2) tallied 246 points.

Davidson replaced Kentucky in the No. 4 position with 184 points while LaSalle jumped from seventh to fifth. The Explorers, under first year Coach Tom Gola, have the best record among the nation's independents.

Kentucky, a loser last weekend to Florida, slipped to sixth with 156 points. St. John's of New York showing considerable poise for a club without exceptional depth, slipped one notch to seventh with 155 points.

Purdue, leader of the Big 10, held eighth place with 84 points. The Boilermakers are 14-4 for the season. Villanova (17-4) was ranked ninth with 54 points and Duquesne (16-2) cracked the top 10, advancing from 15th the previous week. The Ducks replaced Illinois in the elite list.

Here's one ump who admits eye trouble

CINCINNATI (UPI) — Bill Jackowski, who umpired in three World Series and four All-Star Games in addition to more than 2600 National League Games during a 17-year major league career, retired Monday because of an eye ailment and was replaced by Dave Davidson of the Eastern League.

"Bill was universally respected by managers, coaches and players," said NL President Warren Giles in making the announcement. "Umpires of his experience and caliber are impossible to replace."

Jackowski, 54, was purchased by the National League from the American Association on Aug. 18, 1952. An Army veteran of World War II, during which he directed the athletic program at Ft. Devens, Mass., Jackowski started his career as an umpire in 1946 in the Class D Blue Ridge League.

Jackowski also umpired in the Class C Florida International League and the Class B Interstate League. He lives in North Walpole, N.H., where he was born in 1915.

Debut of most spring sports events halted

Scheduled spring sports events which were to have made their seasonal debut today have been postponed until a later date, according to an announcement made by Cabrillo High School athletic department officials. Also cancelled was a Lompoc-Cabrillo baseball scrimmage.

Postponed from today's scheduled list of activity are both the Cabrillo high school track meet with Arroyo Grande and the golf match which was to have been held between Cabrillo and Atascadero at the Village Country Club.

But if you're a die-in-the-wool sports buff, there's still a couple events that weren't washed, or rained, out — today's Santa Barbara County League opening swim meets! Those events have Lompoc hosting San Marcos while Cabrillo travels to Dos Pueblos.

Kentucky takes SEC lead on road game efforts

By United Press International

It's all over except for the shouting for the Kentucky Wildcats who virtually clinched the Southeastern Conference basketball title the hard way: By coming from behind on the road.

The Wildcats found themselves trailing by 14 points against Georgia at Athens, Ga., Monday night before rallying for an 85-77 victory that raised their conference record to 12-1. The Wildcats went two games ahead of second-place Tennessee which lost to Florida 65-63 and is now 10-3 in conference play.

Kentucky, ranked No. 6 in the country with an overall 18-3 record, pulled ahead 41-40 in the first minute of the second half but didn't take the lead for good until it went ahead 57-56 with 11 minutes to go. Mike Casey and Mike Pratt scored 21 points each for Kentucky but the comeback was sparked by sophomore guard Bob McCowan who went in off the bench to score 16 points.

Jerry Epling scored 26 points and Bob Lienhard had 23 for Georgia.

UCLA, the country's first-ranked team and the only other one among the top 20 which played Monday night, rallied from a 22-21 halftime deficit to defeat Washington 53-44 at Seattle, Wash. It was UCLA's 20th straight victory this season and stretched its winning streak to 36 games.

Teo Cruz defends against Ramos

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—For the second time in less than six months, Carlos "Teo" Cruz of the Dominican Republic risks his world lightweight championship tonight against Mando Ramos of San Pedro, Calif., at the Sports Arena.

Both the champion and the challenger expressed confidence of victory as they awaited the start of their 15-round bout. The last time they met was Sept. 27 at the Los Angeles Coliseum and Cruz retained his crown on a close but unanimous decision.

Local backers of Ramos, however, were so confident that he would defeat Cruz the odds here favored him by a 10-6 margin. In other areas there was more support for the champion.

LOMPOC BRAVES wrestler Jess Ortiz bids for an individual championship at 127 pounds Thursday night in the Santa Barbara County League wrestling tournament after going through the season with an undefeated record. Ortiz placed second at 120 pounds last year. Returning Lompoc champions putting titles on the line in the battle to be hosted by Cabrillo are Gary Harwood, Tommy Lewis and Mike Guerra. The only other returning champion is Santa Maria's Jose Rivera.

Short had to beat deal Williams has with Sears

By MILTON RICHMAN
UPI Sports Writer
NEW YORK (UPI)—Ted Williams, one of the highest paid players of all time, automatically becomes the highest paid manager of all time as soon as he scratches his name on that Washington Senators' contract.

"Hopefully it should be within the next couple of days," says Washington owner Bob Short, the man who's shelling out all the heavy cabbage.

"I don't want to pinpoint any one specific day he'll sign and then invite a whole lot of questions if that day passes without his signing. Nothing has changed. We're very close."

Whichever day Williams does sign his name to along-term contract in that neat, small Palmer-like penmanship of his, he'll get $100,000 a year base pay. That alone would make him the highest paid manager ever (Casey Stengel never got quite that much) but Williams will have another little goodie coming in the form of an option to buy 10 per cent of the Senators' stock. Get some paper and pencil and you'll find that comes to $900,000. You'll also find no other manager has ever come close to a deal of this kind and that includes the late Connie Mack, who was the last manager-owner in baseball and really one of a kind.

Short refuses to spell out the terms he has agreed to with Williams although he says he certainly wishes to pay him the same way he was paid as a player with the Boston Red Sox. Nobody in the club's history ever was paid better.

The Red Sox never said whether they paid Williams $135,000 a year or $125,000 but whichever it was, the figure made him high man of his time. Only ones to reach that plateau since were Sandy Koufax and Willie Mays although Frank Robinson also comes close.

But Washington's offer "overwhelmed" Williams, a guy who isn't easily overwhelmed.

The Senators' terms certainly say something for Ted's enduring appeal. Granted we're in the middle of inflation, but who ever offered such men as Babe Ruth or Jack Dempsey a million dollar deal in the same field they came from eight years after they retired? Poor Babe. Nobody in baseball even offered him a cheese sandwich.

Life is funny though and as tremendously appealing as Short's offer was to Williams, the 50-year-old former Boston slugger turned it down at first. "That's right," confirms Short. "If I had taken no for an answer it would have never come to this. When I first talked to Ted about managing the ball club he said, 'Bob, I know you and I'd like to help you...I will help you be seeing you and speaking with you from time to time...but I really don't want to get into this.'"

Short persisted. He knew money alone wouldn't swing it because Williams is making $120,000 a year now working for Sears Roebuck.

Short put it on still another basis. He told Williams how much he could contribute to a club like Washington and more than that, how much he could contribute to the country by coming to manage in a city like Washington which doesn't have the finest image in the world right now. Short was telling the truth. Williams knew he was and in the end that was as much a factor as the money.

"I've seen it written that I became interested in getting Ted Williams as soon as the Washington Redskins got Vince Lombardi," says Short. "That isn't true. I thought about a managerial change when I discussed buying the club. Once I took a good hard look I came to the conclusion the club needed a whole new face. As for a new manager, no matter how many names I put into the mix the two names that always came out on top were Williams and Dimaggio. So I went from there although most everybody I talked to—all the so-called experts—assured me I had no chance to get Ted."

Short, at 51, is only a year older than Williams. He identified with him growing up and can tell you what Williams did the first time he ever saw him playing for Minneapolis 31 years ago. "He hit a home run," says the Senators' new owner. "I followed him from that time on and naturally, the thing that impressed me so much was his great natural ability. Later, I was even more impressed by the superhuman effort that went along with it."

Williams made no special requests in his talks with Short. He didn't even ask for his old No. 9 uniform which he wore with the Red Sox.

"Frank Howard wears it on our club," Short smiles. "I heard that Frank said Ted could have it if he wants."

Slo-Pokes to hold moto-cross Sunday

The Lompoc Slo-Pokes Motorcycle Club will hold a practice moto-cross Sunday at the Santa Maria Speedway, it was reported today.

The moto-cross will begin at 10 a.m. and will feature jumping and "weeely" contests. There will also be a door prize drawing.

There will be a registration fee of $1.50 for all riders. Admission to the public is free of charge.

Bucks are having their fun

By United Press International
The Milwaukee Bucks haven't had much fun during their first season in the National Basketball Association.

They have the second worst record among the league's 14 teams and they're firmly entrenched in the Eastern Division cellar. About the only thing they still have going for them is a chance for the last laugh at the contenders.

Milwaukee threw a pair of jokers at the Western Division to start off the week, upsetting first place Los Angeles on Sunday and following that up with a 123-111 triumph over the runnerup Atlanta Hawks Monday night.

In the second half of the NBA doubleheader at Baltimore, the Cincinnati Royals knocked off the Eastern Division leading Bulls 117-112. This reduced Baltimore's lead over second-place New York to 2 1/2 games.

Flynn Robinson scored 43 points as Milwaukee dropped the Hawks 4 1/2 lengths behind Los Angeles. The Bucks pulled away midway through the final quarter after holding a 96-85 lead at the start of the session. Jim Davis led Atlanta with 31 points.

Baltimore jumped off to a 33-21 first quarter lead against the Royals and led most of the way until Cincinnati moved in front for good with 4:30 left in the game.

Oscar Robertson paced the Royal attack with 26 points and Tom Van Arsdale added 23. Baltimore, which had its four-game winning streak stopped, was led by Earl Monroe's 30 points.

No other games were played Monday night.

Maroon sweater, blue slacks proved embarrassing to wife of Bob Dickson

By IRA PERKOW
NEA Sports Writer
ROCHESTER, N.Y. — (NEA) —The well-turned blonde in blue-and-white print suit stood tip-toe in white golf shoes amidst the gallery engulfing the green. And what she saw embarrassed her.

Bob Dickson's bride, Carolyn, watched him line up a putt under threatening, gusty skies. He was wearing a maroon sweater wrinkled like a worried forehead.

"If I had known," she said, shaking her pony-tailed head, "What that sweater looked like, I'd never have let Bob out the door with it this morning."

"We were leaving for the course and he said 'Maybe it'll get cold, I'd better grab a sweater.' He pulled it out of the drawer and we ran down the stairs. Oh boy."

Dickson was also wearing baby blue - and - white golf shoes and blue slacks. In this era of haute couture golfers, Dickson, with his clashing maroon sweater, was not exactly an Oleg Cassini paradigm.

"Bob does have," said Carolyn, blushing like a newwed, "a blue shirt under that sweater"

The Dicksons have been married one month, and already Carolyn is experiencing the rigors of the professional golf tour. There is so much travel and so much pressure that she has so little time for domesticity.

"I pack an iron," she said. "Not a golf stick, but a pressing iron. And I do our clothes on motel floors. I guess I just missed that sweater."

The Dicksons, despite some inconveniences, lead a life of leisure compared to some young golfing couples, past and present. Dickson, who turned pro in January, was last year's U.S. and British Amateur champion. He is regarded one of the bright rookies on the tour. He also seems to have a generous sponsor, a Tulsa insurance company.

"We take planes from tournament to tournament," said Carolyn. "It's been great fun so far. But I don't feel very domestic. I like to cook, stuffed pork chops and casseroles especially, but you can't do that in motel rooms. I don't even make the beds. The maids do."

The Dicksons met last November, when Bob played in the Cajun Classic. He was visiting a friend in Lafayette, La., and noticed a comely dish carrying trash to her garbage can.

"My neighbor introduced us," she said. "I had never heard of Bob. And as far as golf is concerned, I didn't know a putt from a drive." For all she knew at the time, Bob might have been only the garbage collector. She was working, then, as a paleontology technician, peering into microscopes at fossils, and there is no record of golf in the Mesozoic era.

But they discovered mutual interests, anyway, and a long-distance romance ensued. "Some weekends, if he made the cut," said Carolyn, "I'd fly to his tournament. Other times he'd fly to Lafayette. And our phone bills were astronomical. A hundred dollars a month. That's why we got married — to save money."

Carolyn has become a student of the game, though she doesn't play.

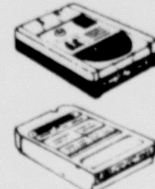

"Bob's been having some troubles on greens," she said. "That's because his lies have been too high. Since we have been married, I've followed Bob around every hole of every round. Except for one practice round, I had to do the laundry."

I don't play, though. Bob said we need at least one sane person in the family.

"The thing that takes a lot of getting used to is the pressure. Every Monday it starts all over in a new tournament, trying to make the cut. Then trying to do well against all these great players. Bob accepts it well. I'm the one who gets nervous aches in the chest watching."

"Sometimes I have to put on sunglasses, to hide the tears."

RUSSELL L. SCHWEICKART — Lunar Module Pilot for Apollo 9 and one of the civilians in the program will be making his first space flight. The 33-year-old New Jersey native will transfer to the lunar module during orbit and fly it apart from the command module for about six hours. He will also perform extravehicular activity.

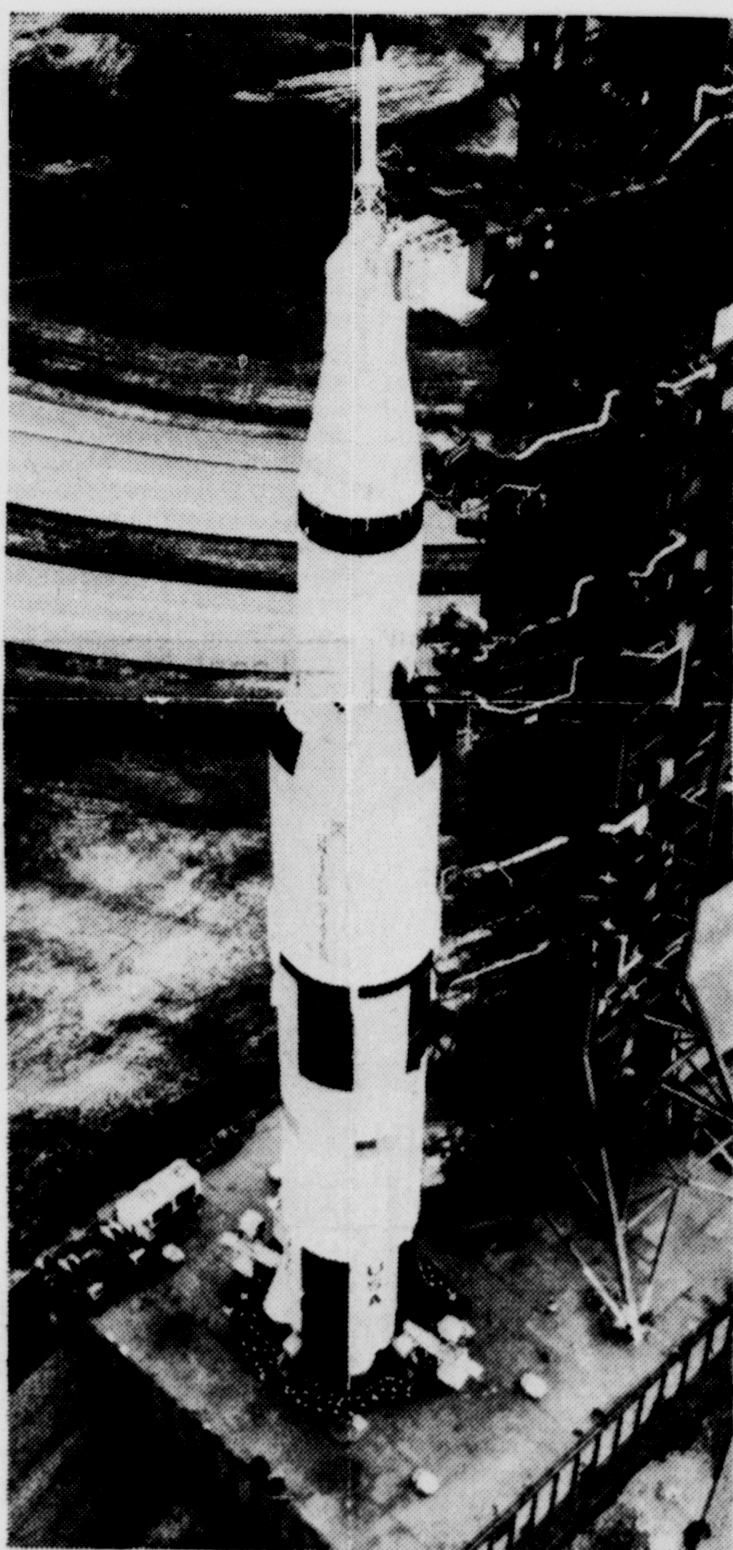

JAMES A. McDIVITT — Commander of Apollo 9 is a space veteran, having flown nearly 98 hours in Gemini 4. The 39-year-old Air Force Colonel from Chicago will be in charge throughout the flight and will join Schweickart in transferring to the lunar module and will be with him while testing the LM's engines in Earth orbit.

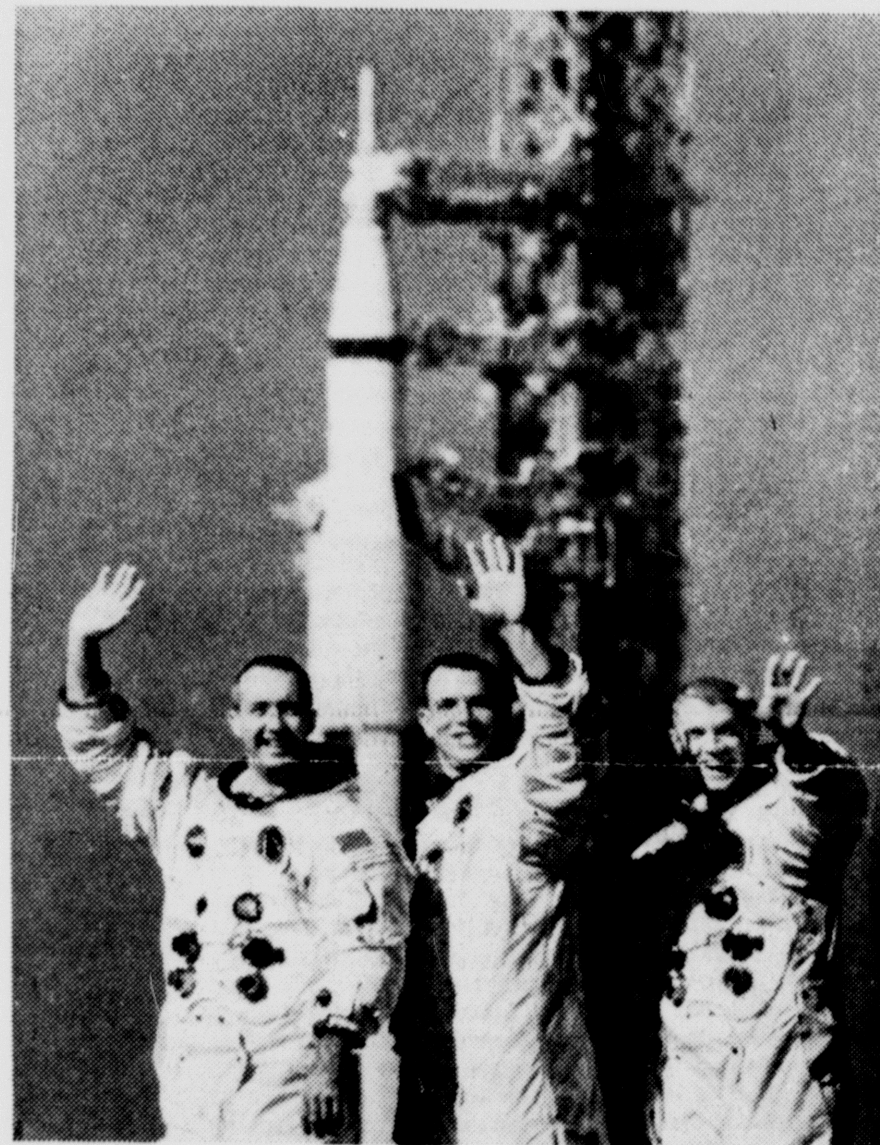

DAVID R. SCOTT — Command Module Pilot of Apollo 9 is a veteran of Gemini 8, which performed the first successful docking operation in space. The 36-year-old Air Force Colonel from San Antonio will fly the command module while Russell Schweickart and James McDivitt are aboard the lunar module during the 10-day Earth-orbiting mission.

TESTING THE LUNAR MODULE — The lunar module for the Apollo 9 mission undergoes testing of its landing gear at Kennedy Space Center, Fla. This will be the first manned flight of the LM. In Apollo 9, Astronauts James McDivitt and Russell Schweickart will operate the LM in Earth orbit and rendezvous and dock with the command and service modules. The crewmen will transfer to the command module before the LM is detached and sent into high Earth orbit. During their maneuvers in the LM McDivitt and Schweickart will operate both the descent and ascent engines. Schweickart will also make a space walk.

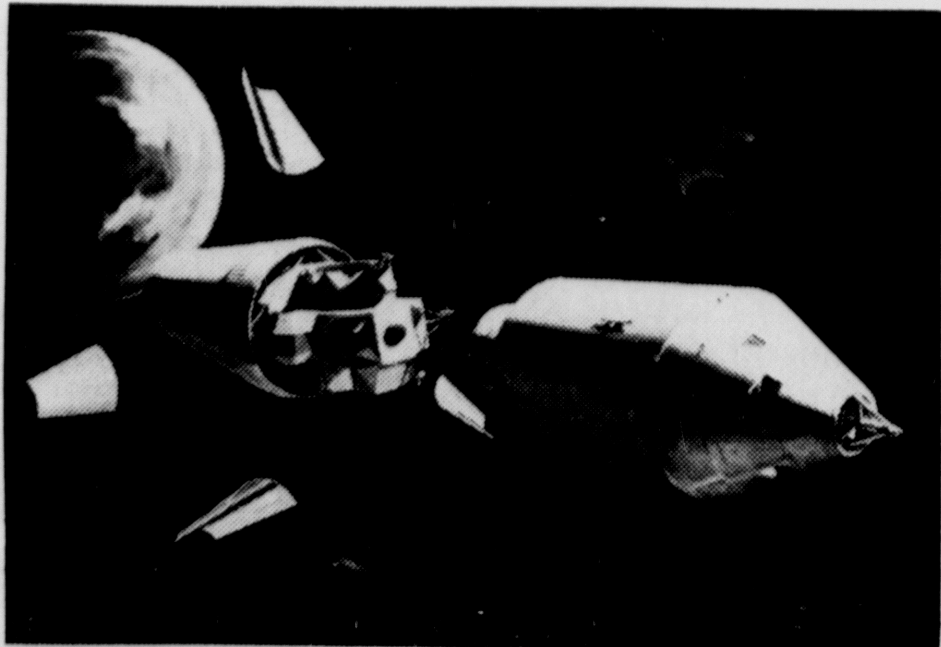

MOVING TO THE PAD — The 363-foot-high Saturn V rocket goes by transporter to Launch Pad A, Complex 39, for the approaching Apollo 9 mission. The 12-million-pound load travels at a speed of half-a-mile-an-hour over a three-and-a-half-mile course. It will launch Astronauts James McDivitt, David Scott and Russell Schweickart on their 10-day Earth orbital mission to test the lunar module for future manned lunar landings.

United States Readies for Apollo 9

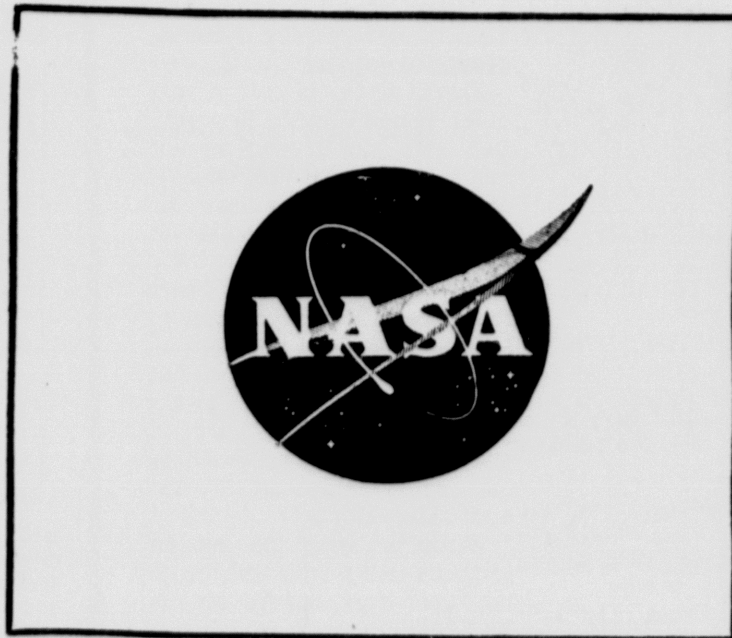

SEPARATION — Artist's drawing shows how the adapter panels will be jettisoned during the Apollo 9 flight, exposing the lunar module still attached to the third stage of the Saturn V launch vehicle. The command and service modules move away from the third stage for a later linkup with the LM. At this stage, Astronauts James McDivitt, David Scott and Russell Schweickart are in the command module.

DOCKING — In the artist's drawing above, the Apollo 9 command and service modules do a 180-degree turn and link up with the lunar module. Astronaut James McDivitt and Russell Schweickart will enter the lunar module through a three-foot tunnel while Astronaut David Scott continues to fly the command module.

ON ITS WAY — The artist's drawing shows the command and service modules attached after separation from the third stage of the Saturn V. In Apollo 9, Astronauts James McDivitt and Russell Schweickart will man the lunar module in Earth orbit separated from the command and service modules. They will rendezvous and dock with the command and service modules and transfer to the command module before the lunar module is sent into a high Earth orbit. The crewmen will return to Earth in the command module.

TV in review

By RICK DU BROW
HOLLYWOOD (UPI)—"NBC Experiment in Television," which appears mostly on weekend afternoons, illustrated again Sunday why it ought to have a regular prime time spot: this time with a drama about a Negro American teacher who visits his German-born, black nephew in Munich.

There was no major "experiment" in the fine piece of work by writer Manya Starr, who did the original teleplay. It was simply a first-rate contribution to television, far superior to almost anything seen in prime time, and one hopes it gets a rerun out at night before the mass audience.

The production, in fact, was such a true and affecting story—involving a search for identity by the teacher, the nephew and the youth's white German mother—that one felt it definitely had the makings to be expanded into a full-length motion picture.

There were times that the video compression had a constricting effect on the story, which was fairly bursting—as a living piece of work always will be—to be told in all its proper dimension. It was little surprise, then, to learn that Bavaria Film Atelier, with which NBC-TV collaborated in the production, "will show a longer version in Germany."

The one-hour video drama, "Color Me German," offered three principal characters who were so compelling that one could identify in compassion with all of them. And the location filming in and around Munich contributed greatly to the simple reality that was so winning in the story.

James Edwards, whom many moviegoers will remember vividly from "Home of the Brave," portrayed the American teacher—a man who is uncomfortable in middle age with the new racial militancy in the United States, and whose doubts about his place in U.S. life have him thinking about staying in Munich.

Ron Williams, as the black 23-year-old German nephew, had the role of a youngster who was sired by an American G.I., and who tries—perhaps too hard—to believe he is truly accepted in Germany, but knows in his heart he is not.

Rosemarie Fendel, as the attractive white woman who lives with her black son, played a brave but tragic lady whose life was ruined by the illegitimate birth, whose family refuses to accept her offspring and whose boyfriend will not marry her so long as the young man is around.

Miss Starr's play, produced and directed with grace and feeling by Victor Vicas, touched feelingly on the problem of the thousands of "mischlings" (children of mixed racial parentage), but never slipped away from its gripping story of three people.

The arrival in Munich of the teacher, portrayed with searing restraint by Edwards, precipitates the showdown in the lives of all three. Immediately he becomes a father substitute for the high-spirited, good-natured black youth, whose role was enacted by Williams with a poignant attractiveness that made the play come alive—and stay that way.

The mother and Edwards are attracted to each other, and for a while it looks as though something will come of this—making for a new family of three. But several incidents make all too clear to Edwards the real state of his nephew in Germany.

And with the young man's exuberance — and situation — bringing alive in the uncle the dormant pride in being just a free man, it is finally resolved the two will return to the United States together, permanently. The mother loses her son, and it is wrenching and cruel, yet she is finally, perversely, freed from the bondage imposed on her by those others around her.

In a fascinating sidelight to the play, NBC-TV notes that the germinal idea for the story came from Edwards, whose "late brother had a son by a Swiss-German wife...The young man is now living in Switzerland."

Leaflet published for lettuce growers

The University of California has published a leaflet designed to help lettuce growers cope with an $11,000,000-a-year problem — weed control.

The publication, "Weed Control in Lettuce," deals with chemical weed control in the major California lettuce areas. Authors are Arthur H. Lange, Extension weed control specialist at UC-Riverside; Harry S. Agamalian, Monterey County farm advisor; James M. Lyons, UCR associate plant physiologist; and Edwin K. Stillwell, Contra Costa County farm advisor.

They estimate that weeds cost California lettuce growers $4,000,000 annually to control and that about $7,000,000 in crop loss is due to weed competition.

"Weed Control in Lettuce" names herbicides used in weed control, discusses differences in herbicide usage in various areas, and describes techniques of herbicide application.

Lettuce is grown on a large scale in 12 California counties: Monterey, with 50,340 acres; Imperial (42,200 acres); Riverside, Fresno, San Luis Obispo, Santa Cruz, Contra Costa, Santa Barbara, Ventura, Kern, Alameda, and San Benito.

The leaflet can be obtained from Farm and Home Advisors Offices of the University in nearly all California counties.

Cal-Poly now offering BA degree in speech

Establishment of a Bachelor of Arts degree in speech has been announced by California State Polytechnic College.

The new degree program, to take effect with the fall quarter in September, 1969, was announced by Dr. Carl C. Cummins, dean of the college's School of Applied Arts. It will be administered by Cal Poly's new Speech Department, headed by Dr. James R. Emmel.

Dr. Cummins said the new curriculum is primarily designed to prepare teachers. "It will also develop their abilities to take charge of speech activities and to direct programs in drama and forensics," he added.

The dean said approval of the new degree by the chancellor of the California State Colleges, Dr. Glenn S. Dumke, was based primarily on the critical need for elementary, secondary, and college-level speech teachers in California.

Practical experience for Cal Poly speech students will include a variety of related activities. Cal Poly's student-operated FM radio station, KCPR will provide opportunities for radio announcing, program production, and station management. At least six drama productions on the campus each year provide experience in acting, directing and production of plays. College public speaking events and a new program in speech correction will also supplement course work.

Dr. Emmel noted, "A recent survey indicated that our state needs more speech and drama teachers in the elementary through junior college levels than any other state."

"Students planning to enter business industrial, or governmental service in such areas as personnel or labor-management relations should also find the new degree major of interest as a background for those fields," the Cal Poly speech educator continued.

Twelve new courses will be added to the Speech Department's schedule of offerings for 1969-70 to accommodate the new program. They include such courses as "Essentials of Discussion," "Argumentation and Debate," "Introduction to Speech Correction," "Industrial and Professional Speech," and "History and Criticism of Public Address."

The new major in speech joins several other programs that will be offered at Cal Poly for the first time this fall. Bachelor's degree majors in history, computer science, and engineering technology have all been announced and are scheduled for inclusion in the college's catalog when it is issued this spring.

The speech degree becomes the third Bachelor of Arts degree offered by the Cal Poly; others are in English and history. The college also offers a Bachelor of Architecture degree and 37 Bachelor of Science degrees, chiefly in agriculture and engineering. Cal Poly's graduate studies include 8 master's degree programs.

Road ahead

The cautious, exploratory, unflamboyant and unspectacular manner in which Richard Nixon has taken over the reins of the presidency augurs well for the future.

Lacking the popularity and influence on Capitol Hill which Lyndon Johnson began his first term, Nixon's first task is to convince a Congress controlled by the opposition party that he is not going to be a chief executive who pushes or pulls that reluctant body along certain legislative roads he has mapped out, but rather one who will work with them quietly and responsibly in surveying the landscape of national needs and laying out the paths that should be taken.

In other words, Nixon is not going to be a "personality" president. He does not have that old "charisma," and at this point in history it may be a good thing that he does not. At least, it is a welcome change.

President Johnson began in a burst of legislative glory, proposing and signing more far-reaching social legislation than had been seen since the heyday of the New Deal. The nation, mourning the slain John Kennedy, was in a mood to erect monuments to him by righting many old wrongs and attending to many neglected needs.

President Nixon has as yet sent no major requests to Congress, but already there is good indication that his administration may be remembered as having dealt, in its own unspectacular way, with certain issues as fundamental as any embodied in the New Frontiers or Great Society.

The nation is now in a different mood, and the time is ripe, or ripening, for a number of things.

Water crossroads

I don't think it's an exaggeration to say Lompoc Valley specifically and Santa Barbara County generally are at the crossroads. The future will record whether people of all political persuasions and economic status united in efforts to solve common water problems or whether they allowed narrow partisan interests to turn them back into the past.

Everyone agrees that Lompoc Valley will need supplemental water, but not all agree on the timing. Furthermore most experts and interested persons agree that Lompoc Narrows Dam Project is the most feasible of all proposed solutions to future water needs. There is also a general consensus that the dam will provide vital flood control.

Richard Henning, local rancher and representative of division three in Santa Ynez River Water Conservation District has agreed that the Valley will need more water, over and beyond present ground waters and possible supplies from the State Feather River Project.

The other night, however, in a 10-minute speech before the United Republicans of California, UROC, Henning went further and said he thought the Lompoc Narrows Dam project was the most feasible of all alternatives. Later, Henning told this reporter that the statement was not a change in his thinking. Henning had championed an engineering look at the possibility of building a dam facility on Salsipuedes, but he told this reporter such a facility would probably doom the construction at the Narrows forever.

Henning is still critical of the location of the Narrows Dam so close to the ocean. He has also been critical of the cost and of certain facets of the feasibility study prepared by the Bureau of Reclamation.

All this notwithstanding, I recall Henning some months ago telling his fellow directors on the water district board that we can't stand in the way of progress.

Henning has gone farther than most interested persons in trying to grasp the significance of the bureau's feasibility study and has gone out of his way to become an expert on the state project. He has toured the facilities of the state's multi-million dollar project and has developed a comprehensive picture of the network of facilities that will carry the vital water from the north.

For these reasons, he has become a highly valued voice on such matters. It would be a shame if his reluctance to endorse the Narrows Dam 100 per cent, were to provide ammunition for those interests that oppose it completely.

It would also be a shame if the opposition of a handful of ranchers in the areas south of Lompoc were to create the impression of massive opposition to the project.

It should be borne in mind that the Congress is not about to appropriate money for a project that is either economically or engineering-wise unfeasible.

Opposition to the Narrows Dam project has concentrated on three main points: the question of whether ranchers and the city of Lompoc are or are not pumping more water from the underground than is being replaced each year; on the amount of land that would be inundated by the lake backing up behind the dam and on the cost.

The only expert to my knowledge who has challenged the bureau's claim that there is an overdraft is Thomas Stetson, engineering consultant to the water district. I respect Stetson's integrity and professional competence. His qualifications and experience for the job are impressive. More than that I like the guy. Yet the only evidence that a county water consultant has in fact reversed his previous estimate that an overdraft exists is a report that he might change his mind if he surveyed the question today; and on the other hand an apparent reluctance to positively assert that an overdraft exists.

The question of the cost is academic. When the chips are down the federal government is not about to saddle any community with an oppressive financial burden and is not about to approve a project that isn't in fact needed.

There is abundant proof for these contentions.

On the question of the amount of land that would be inundated by water, there can be no defense if it's your land that has to go. One of the best arguments that has been advanced on the question is the one Virgil Phelps used some months ago at a Farm Bureau meeting in Lompoc. He said it was literally six of one and a half dozen of another. He said whereas some local ranchers were opposing the construction of the dam because of the necessary loss of the land, those same ranchers were telling us to concentrate on water imported from the state project. Phelps who is a rancher and director of the water district, noted that some beautiful valleys in the northern part of the state had to be covered with water in order to make the state water possible here.

Totally Moscow

The East Germany that is making noises again about West Berlin, and may try to make trouble for President Richard M. Nixon when he gets there on February 27, is not a satellite country. It is an occupied country. The voice — and all actions — are totally Moscow's.

There is a uniformed Soviet commandant and his administrative staff on duty in every East German center and in more than 100 communities right down to the grass roots.

More than 300,000 Russian troops are stationed in East Germany. These comprise 14 fully mechanized divisions with their platoons of tanks. Since the Soviet reconquest of Czechoslovakia, which was, behind the scenes, really a redeployment of the Soviet forces in Western Europe, these 300,000 are likewise supported by the Soviet divisions in Czechoslovakia. It is the Kremlin's westernmost force, its vanguard standing 93 miles from the Rhine.

About 42,500 Russian Army soldiers ring Berlin. This involves the matter of the walls — for, perhaps unrealized by us, there are two, not one.

The Berlin area (East and West) is so immense that Frankfurt, Stuttgart, and Munich combined would fit into it. East Berlin alone covers 153 square miles. "Insulaner" (islander) is the West Berliners' name for themselves. About 700,000 of West Berlin's population have relatives in East Berlin. There are 1.1 million residents. In German "Standesgemass" means "in accord with status." The East Berliners have nothing, and they have no true status.

On Sunday, August 13, 1961, communism put up the Berlin wall. Three million people had fled west, East Germany is the only country in Europe, and probably in the entire world, which has a smaller population today than in 1945.

The first wall, an electrically charged barbed-wire barricade 95 miles long, circles the city. The 1961 wall, which divides the city, runs a solid 10 miles. About 70,000 East German workers are diverted to keep the two walls constantly under repair. In addition, the manpower of 50,000 East Berlin police, a guard which alone is about twice the size of the entire New York City police force for eight million people, is needed to guard and patrol the wall.

The Soviet troops are commanded by a four-star general from an immense (former Nazi) headquarters at Wurmsdorf, 30 miles from Potsdam, East Germany. So is the Soviet Air Force.

Soviet officer defections in East Germany are rare. But in the ranks, where Soviet Communist party membership runs less than 10 per cent and with a Communist lieutenant being paid 100 times as much as an ordinary Red Army soldier, an average 3,000 Russian soldiers are defecting to the West each year.

Violating the Potsdam Agreement only three months after it was signed, the Kremlin has constantly built the so-called National People's Army. About 93 per cent of its officers today are Communist party members. It comprises more than 1.4 million men — 200,000 permanent; 450,000 active reservists; 320,000 in the special "Kampfgruppen," or "battle groups," of the Communist party, a paramilitary force of armed workers; and 450,000 more in youth leagues.

The German commander has been made a Soviet citizen, with a Soviet general's rank, as controlled beyond himself as a puppet glove. Gen. Wilhelm Adam, aide to Nazi Field Marshal Friedrich von Paulus, who was captured at Stalingrad and then espoused the Communist cause, commands the NPA War Academy, which is in Dresden and is fashioned on the Hitler general staff pattern.

In fact, there are an estimated 400 hard-core ex-Nazis in the army high command and East German government. These include Gen. Willi Stoph, the Prime Minister, no less.

The Kremlin has followed the same pattern with the East German Staatssicherheitsdienst (STB) secret police. In January, 1945, shortly before the German collapse, part of the Nazi SS and Gestapo headquarters moved from Berlin to Salzburg. It was scattered through Austria's Styrian lakes area of the Tyrolean Salzkammer region. The Russians seized most of the Nazi intelligence records and recruited these agents wholesale into the STB.

Those in charge of our intelligence in Berlin tell me there are an incredible 12,000 Iron Curtain agents in West Berlin alone. They practice the technique called "uberschwemmung," or inundation. If one Red agent is caught or disappears the Kremlin replaces him with four or five more.

The East German government facade — constructed to confuse us — is sheer nonsense.

Courthouse report by Dick Paul

Bold move

In the midst of all the furor caused by oil contamination of choice South Coast beach and harbor areas, the little city of Carpinteria has come up with a bold new move in its chess-like game against giant Standard Oil Co. of California.

No doubt, Carpinteria city officials felt it was a good time to make the move.

A petition for annexation of 151 acres of valuable industrially zoned land just east of the city — including the multi-million dollar Standard Oil Co. oil processing plant, storage and other facilities — has been filed with the Local Agency Formation Commission.

This first-step to annex the property of Standard Oil Co., and also that of Humble Oil and Refining Co. plus other enterprises extending to the west boundary of the old Thunderbowl racing property will move forward when LAFCO schedules a public hearing.

Protests of owners of 51 per cent of the total assessed valuation of the properties involved could block annexation. Thus, success of the annexation seems to hinge on the willingness of the two oil companies to become part of the city.

Carpinteria city officials indicate they feel that the city has several good things going for it in the drive to annex the properties.

"The South Coast of Santa Barbara County has become a mighty sensitive area for the entire oil industry," one city representative points out. "If Standard Oil and Humble Oil are willing to join this small city and help share the burdens of local government, it would be a mighty fine public relations gesture."

Iffy question

WASHINGTON (NEA)

To demonstrate the extreme difficulty of the decision President Nixon, Defense Secretary Laird and Deputy Defense Secretary David Packard must make on the Sentinel antiballistic missile system, it is necessary to tell the experience of a friend.

This senior engineer was sent by his company, a large manufacturing concern, to study the country's major textile plants to determine whether it would be feasible to move into the textile machinery business.

My friend, in his study, demonstrated that it would be possible to produce machinery with double the efficiency of the obsolete machines then in operation. But he recommended against the move.

He predicted that about the time his machinery was developed, the bugs eliminated and sales well under way, new research would have brought about a revolution in cloth making. His new machinery would thus be obsolete and his company faced with heavy losses.

If Nixon, Laird and Packard move too quickly into the extremely costly Sentinel ABM system, the United States may end up with outmoded defenses and tens of billions of dollars down the drain. (The Soviet Union may have made this mistake in its own antimissile defense system.)

If, on the contrary, Nixon, Laird and Packard wait too long to build, this country may find itself naked in antiballistic missile defenses when we most need them. No amount of money however hastily spent could make up for this lack.

The wise defense man puts off as long as he "safely" can the decision to build any extremely costly new system in a field where science and technology are moving rapidly. Meanwhile, he pours in large sums on research and development so that when the decision must be made, he'll have a system as advanced as he can possibly make it at the moment of decision.

The key word in the above paragraph is "safely." Determining how long a nation can wait "safely" has some of the elements of the automobile game called "chicken" in which two drivers charge at each other head on, each deciding how close he can "safely" come to the opponent before veering off course.

But the making of these decisions also have some elements of poker in a game with experts (except that defense players cannot afford to be bluffing). Nixon, Laird and Packard must guess from odds and ends of information not only what the Soviet Union and Red Chinese have but also what they are likely to come up with and when as a result of their own research.

Computers can help estimate the probabilities; they can't give the answers or make the decisions.

Packard, of course, was brought into the Defense Department to help with just this sort of problem.
